

The Wedding Of Sifra Faienstein

This is Sifra on the left, a sister of my wife, with her husband, Simca, on the right, when they got married. They married before us, in 1945. Sifra adopted a Romanian name at a certain point, they called her Aura. This eldest sister was born in 1921. She attended the Commercial High School, then she went to the Faculty of Law. She worked in Bucharest in the field of journalism. Simca worked as an expert accountant. They left to Israel 20 years ago and have a 58-year-old daughter who is already a grandmother.

My wife's family situation wasn't very different [from ours]. They were 5 children, 3 girls and 2 boys. The girls went to school during roughly the same period. Her mother wanted all her girls to be elegant and she woke up at the crack of dawn to iron their school uniforms. The uniforms were washed and the collars were starched, and in order for them not to wear their great coats over the collars, they went to school with the collar placed in a book and they attached it once they arrived at school. The girls wore their hair long, and their mother had to braid it into plaits and iron their bows.

My wife had 4 other siblings: 2 sisters and 2 brothers. Her eldest sister's name was Sifra Faienstein. Her brother, Puiu Faienstein, was born in 1923; he worked as a clerk in a store, then as a driver until his retirement. Beti Faienstein was born in 1926, she graduated high school and a few years at the university, after which she worked as a draughtsman for CFR until her retirement. Eli Faienstein was my wife's youngest brother. He was born in 1928. Their father died when Eli was 12, he had various jobs here in Romania, then he left to Israel at 16.
