

Esphir Kalantyrskaya Together With Reposing Recreation Home "Belaya Dachka"

Recreation home "Belaya dacha" in Irpen near Kiev in 1940. I am the second on the right in the 2nd row.

I wasn't a Komsomol member and didn't take part in public life. But I had many friends: Jews, Russians and Ukrainians. Nobody cared about nationality at that time. To be a good person was sufficient. My friends and I went to the cinema in Podol, to the beach and for walks. We always celebrated Soviet holidays: 1st of May, October Revolution Day, etc. We went to parades. Several times the factory trade union committee granted me a free trip to a recreation home. I rested at the Belaya Dachka recreation center in Irpen near Kiev. That's where this photo was taken! I felt very comfortable and equal to other young people staying there. I also rested in Kislovodsk, Caucasus, and went to the sea.

I still lived with my father and Sophia before WWII. Clara lived with her husband and Grigory went to the hostel. I could go to the hostel, too, but my father fell very ill. He had cancer and was ill for a very long time suffering great pains. I couldn't leave Sophia alone with him. Father died in 1938. Sophia didn't remarry.
